A first-ever report from AAA and Aspire finds that 40 percent of American women plan to take a girls-only vacation soon. The survey found that girlfriend getaways are growing in popularity, in part because American women feel the need to escape their personal and professional responsibilities. The report also shows that vacations including just girlfriends and female family members ease stress and have become an important part of the lives of American women. The report is based on focus groups, online and phone surveys of more than 1,200 U.S. women. Full details will be announced Thursday.
